PRINCIPLES OF GUIDELINES INSTRUCTION

PREAMBLE:

The Committee for Tactical Emergency Casualty Care (C-TECC) encourages application of the Tactical Emergency Casualty Care (TECC) Guidelines for all levels of operational pre-hospital providers, medical and non-medical. Instruction and operationalization of the Guidelines are unique to each entity that is implementing them; thus we encourage entities or agencies to create their own internal training programs, specific to their agency, providers, and institutional culture. However, we also realize that this may not be possible or desirable for some agencies or personnel, and thus encourage professional training entities to create TECC training and implementation programs. These educational entities have certain responsibilities to the student or agency as it relates to the instruction and use of the Guidelines; therefore, the Committee for Tactical Emergency Casualty Care sets forth the basic TECC guidelines instruction principles and practices to which educational entities that are recognized by the Committee will continue to adhere to during the conduct of their TECC education and consulting.

PRINCIPLES OF TECC GUIDELINES INSTRUCTION:

As an educational entity that is recognized to be in accordance with the C-TECC Principles of Guidelines Instruction by the Committee for Tactical Emergency Casualty Care, we (I) agree to:

1. Provide instructors that are qualified to instruct the Guidelines to the appropriate scope of practice and approved medical protocols of the student.
 - a) Ensure all instructors have the education, experience, and background appropriate for the content they are teaching.
 - b) Do not misrepresent the background or TECC/high threat operational experience of the instructors.
 - c) Do not misrepresent the experience, background, or clientele of the entity providing TECC training or consulting.
2. Provide TECC instructors and consulting personnel that are accurate, current and up-to-date with the Guidelines.
 - a) Update and maintain their instructional curriculum and material to reflect the most recent update of the Guidelines.
 - b) Be knowledgeable of the medical evidence from which the Guidelines are created.
 - c) Provide a written or electronic copy of the most recent Guidelines and other TECC educational resources as available.
3. Instruct the education of the Guidelines without altering the inherent procedure, intent or purpose.
 - a) Utilize the language of the Guidelines as written without alteration in all

- educational material and instruction.*
- b) Instruct the Guidelines as appropriate for the scope of practice and accepted medical protocols of the student.
 - c) Provide demonstration, additional instruction, or additional educational resources at student's request.
4. Instruct the operational application of the Guidelines without altering the inherent procedure, intent or purpose.
 - a) Do not instruct medical procedures not already contained in the guidelines' phases of care during the Guidelines education. Procedures outside of the scope of the Guidelines may be instructed but must be clearly identified as not part of the Guidelines. This does not preclude removing parts or steps of care that are inappropriate or not applicable to the students' operational mission, medical education level, scope of practice, or approved medical protocols.
 5. Allow for student feedback and incorporate that back into future courses as appropriate.
 - a) Provide a venue within the entity for students to complain or notify the entity of failure to follow the C-TECC Principles of Guidelines Instruction.
 - b) Provide students with information on how to file complaint with the Committee for Tactical Emergency Casualty Care for instructional practices that do not follow the listed Principles of Guidelines Instruction if not internally resolved to the student's acceptance.
 6. No misrepresentation of the intent or proper application of the Guidelines in any way.
 7. No attribution of the Committee's approval or endorsement in any way to any specific product or company. Display the provided disclaimer statement on the Recognized Educational Partner Logo slide and any course materials.
